SECOND SUNDAY OF ADVENT REFLECTION

A question often asked of children is "Who do you want to be when you grow up?" Responses may be such as an airplane pilot, a doctor, a nurse, a lawyer, a professional baseball player. This question becomes more real and anxiety-ridden in our college years when deciding on a major. The decision seems to carry such weight on one's psyche, it seems as if by making this decision, we will have emerged from the fortuneteller's tent and the vote of our future success or fortune in life has been cast. However, interpreting this question from a professional standpoint only leads us to one level of living out our life; it focuses only on what we might do, it doesn't really respond to who will we be.

The most profound experience I have had of asking myself, "Who do I want to be?" came for me after my dad's death. Less than forty-eight hours after learning he had a brain tumor, the tumor burst and he was gone. In the shock and grieving, I reflected on many regrets of things unsaid or said, attitudes and behaviors I wished I had been more mature than to express toward him. I resolved within myself that when I see him again, I want to be a more mature woman. I want to be a woman that he would be proud of. I asked myself, who is the woman I want to be "when I grow up?"

In today's second reading, we are told that when the Lord comes, "the elements will be dissolved by fire... and everything done on it will be found out. Since everything is to be dissolved in this way, what sort of persons ought you to be?" As adults, this question should take on a new meaning and call us to consider the living of our life on a deeper level; that of how we live our life. Who is the person we want to be? This is not about doing. Reflecting truthfully on who we are, the kind of person we are and who it is we want to be, (ie. Am I a woman of love? Am I a man of integrity?) may be discouraging. We may look at ourselves and find much that is distasteful and lacking. Here is where the good news of today's readings comes in. God is like a shepherd who feeds his flock, God speaks tenderly to God's people and forgives their guilt. God is patient with us, and is not lurking around every corner waiting to catch us in our failures and smallness. God wants for us to grow into the beautiful human beings we have been created to be, each one in God's own image, created for love and to be love on earth. God is patient with us. God is actually waiting for us to come to him, to open to him and to believe in his power to save us, to heal us, to transform us.

God's time is not our time. Advent is a time of waiting for Christ to come, to come within us and transform us. Our readings today speak of God's tender love and forgiveness, and that God is faithful in keeping his promise that he will send us a savior who will redeem us from our sins. Christ has come and has redeemed us.

Who is it that you most desire to be? Who is the best person you can imagine yourself being? With God's help, we can each grow into something more beautiful that we can ever ask or imagine and we will know true peace. "Be eager to be found without spot or blemish before him, at peace."

R.I.P. Fr. Bede Wilks, O.P.

1929 - 2011

2012 would be the 50th Anniversary of Fr. Bede Wilk's ordination to the priesthood. He has touched many lives ministering throughout the Western United States in those years. Born in Cheyenne, Wyoming, young Frank Wilks spent his adolescence working for the Union Pacific Railroad in his native state. After serving in the United States Navy during the Korean Conflict, Frank was able to use the GI Bill to begin his college studies. Baptized a Catholic while in the Navy, Frank continued practicing his new-found faith at the Newman Center at the University of Washington. It was there that he met the Dominican Friars. He entered the Order in 1956, taking the religious name "Bede." He spent his formation years at Saint Albert's College in Oakland, CA.

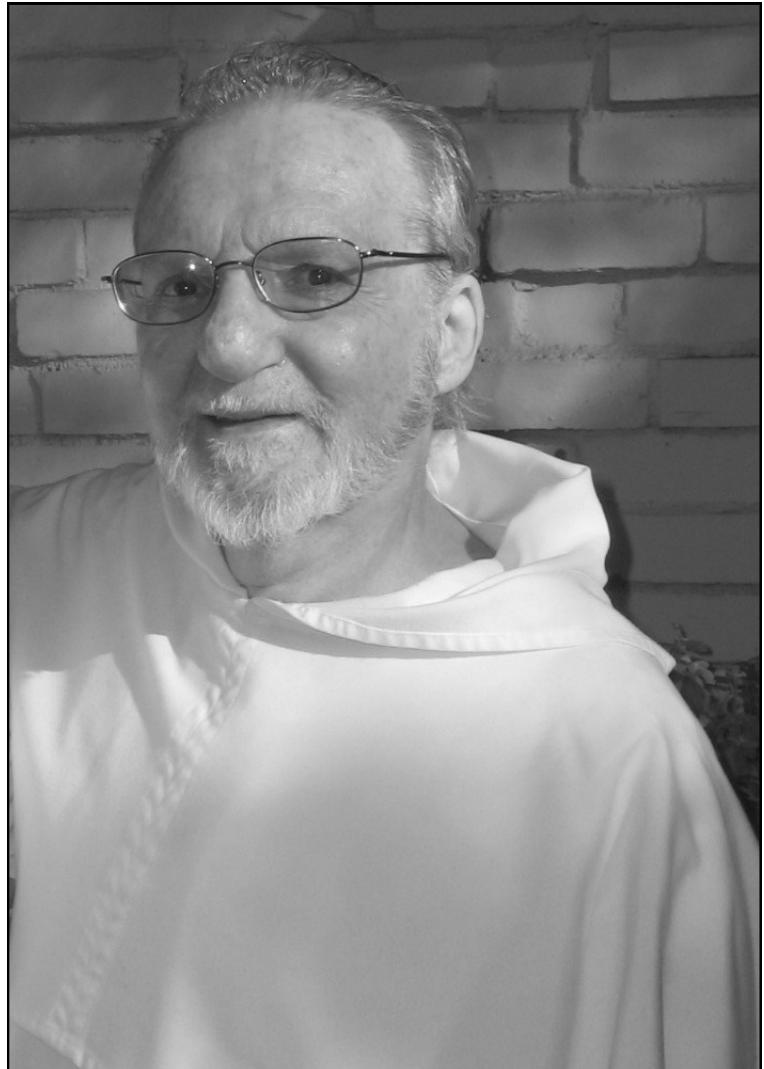

During his years as a priest, Bede served in many pastoral ministries both in the parochial setting and in university ministry. Notable among his assignments are Anchorage, Eugene, OR, Salt Lake City, and, of course, here in Tucson. Known as a man of great humor and a quick and sharp wit, he was a wordsmith of highest order and used all of those gifts in ministry and in preaching.

When Fr. Bede retired from active ministry to Tucson in 2004, he was already beginning to show signs of Alzheimer's Disease. He made his final move to Handmaker's Jewish Services for the Aging in 2006, where he spent the last five years of his life. We are so grateful to the wonderful patient care staffs on the Tynan and Golding Units at Handmaker for their extraordinary care for Fr. Bede in his declining years.

It is hard to see a beloved brother, especially one who trafficked so easily in words all his life, ravaged by the effects of dementia. But even as late as November 6, when last I was able to speak with Fr. Bede, his sense of humor and love for words were still present.

Having probably suffered a stroke in the second week of November, Fr. Bede's final decline came rapidly. Called to his bedside last Friday evening, we were able to offer our brother last rites and to sing the Dominican Salve Regina in his room. He died peacefully less than hour later. Fr. Bede was 82.

Thank you, Bede, for a life of dedicated service. You have guided many to the Lord. May the angels and saints now receive your soul and guide you to Lord's side. Rest in Peace, Brother.

The following was written by Fr. Bede for a bulletin publication (parish unknown) and read by Fr. Miguel Rolland, OP at Fr. Bede's funeral service:

It doesn't seem a wondrous thing that November is the month in which we remember the dead. For about a month now, the leaves have been letting loose of their tree limbs and falling quietly to carpet the ground below. Their fall is always tinged with sadness, redolent as it is of the temporariness of living things, and ultimately with their death. So in November we remember all the people who have existed on this earth and have fallen into death. We join hands with them in this great community of humankind beginning with the first human and extending to the last human that will be. My hope is that this will be coextensive with the Church; but we have to leave that to God's wisdom which is so much greater than our wisdom. We join hands, we human beings, to pray to God for all those who have been, who are, or who will be fire-tired before gaining entry to the face of God. Purgatory: a place of being purged, of being cleansed, that all things dark, all things twisted, thorned, venomous; all blinding thing, false and deceiving, everything of darkness be burnt away from us so that nothing remains of us but clarity of vision and love. How much to be desired, this cleansing; whether it be here or there. Pain and humiliation are desired that love might emerge. "Like a dry weary land without water" sings the psalmist, "so my soul longs for you my God."

So, it is November, the month of the dead. And, although red berries, naked and blatant in their unleaved state, still decorate the trees in front of the church, they only await the hoard of cedar waxwings to make their November repast of them, and the trees will appear dead. But we know, like all of those being cleansed, that in Christ there is unsurpassing beauty of LIFE.
