Fr. John Paul's Spiritual Brew

Wisdom always invites one to take a higher road, and to travel a more intentional path. This is not always easy.... but produces for the seeker a beauty and freedom that cannot be matched.

Today's first reading and Gospel invite its hearers, and readers.... to shed the mire of only experiencing life through a physical and intellectual lens.... to continuing the journey "equipped" physically and intellectually.... to and through a spiritual landscape, as well.

Jesus says, "Your ancestors ate manna in the desert, and died.... But, the bread I will give you will cause you to live and not die..... For the bread I give is my flesh for the life of the world"

This is a beautiful and an intense statement. It boggles the mind, and goes beyond any intelligible quantifiable control.

For those of us who embrace the physical/ intellectual, but also see and accept the "spiritual" as a part of having a whole picture..... we simply breathe, and say "Come Holy Spirit... help me to connect the dots appropriately... and with the understanding that I need to live my life fully". For wisdom after all.... is the correct appropriation of the knowledge that we have received, experienced, tested, and lived.... We can now see how it is both helpful and true.

As we begin a new school year at the University of Arizona... May we be open to "God's Spirit which is upon us". Directing our minds, hearts, and souls towards greater truth and love!

Welcome to your Newman Catholic Community at the U of A! We are glad that you are here, and look forward to meeting you, or welcoming you back!
