Fr. John Paul's Spiritual Brew

Doing justice is at the very heart of the biblical story. From the very first words spoken in the Book of Genesis—"Let there be light"—and there was. With those words, God sets the direction of creation: an upward movement, a pulling out of darkness, a summons toward life. It is as if God is saying, "Do not stay in the dark. Let my light reach you. Let my Spirit fill you." That same Spirit echoes through the Gospel we hear today, when Jesus looks at the crowd and says: "Blessed are the poor in spirit. Blessed are those who mourn. Blessed are the meek. Blessed are those who hunger and thirst for righteousness. Blessed are the merciful, the clean of heart, the peacemakers. Blessed are those who are persecuted and insulted for the sake of truth—because of me." And then he says something astonishing: "Rejoice and be glad, for your reward in heaven will be great." But let's be honest. Can we wait that long? Can we rejoice and be glad when we feel exhausted, frustrated, and saddened by the news that surrounds us? Can we do this when our plans fall apart? When anxiety tightens its grip? When we feel immobilized by our own lives? Under many of these circumstances—it is hard. But... it is not impossible. It becomes possible only when we allow ourselves to be lifted and supported by God, in the many ways God comes to us disguised as our lives.

One of the most powerful ways God comes to us is through authentic friendship—through people who have known God's healing, God's strength, God's transforming love. Faith lives in these people. Hope rises in these people. Love becomes visible through these people. They are, as Scripture says, friends of God. Friends of God can rejoice and be glad not because life is easy, but because they are nourished by a greater "why," a deeper truth, and a path that leads toward ultimate fulfillment.

In days filled with so many voices, it is easy to get swept away and miss the many life-rafts God sends us—the people, stories, and witnesses that help us breathe again and stay afloat. St. Paul gives us a beautiful image: we are surrounded by a great cloud of witnesses—holy women and men across history who stood at the edge of poverty, loss, fear, and disappointment and still prayed, "Come, Holy Spirit. Overshadow me. Raise me up. Help me walk in the light of your love."

This is exactly what Jesus is doing in today's Gospel—standing among the people, seeing their faces, their struggles and their hope, and choosing simply to walk with them. This is his real presence—then and now. We receive it here, in this Holy Eucharist, in this Mass where God's Word is spoken again through his friends: "Not many of you were wise by human standards. Not many were powerful. Not many were of noble birth. But God chose the foolish to shame the wise, the lowly and despised—those who seem to count for nothing—so that no one might boast before God." If that isn't what it means to be seen and loved, And Zephaniah assures us: "You shall be pastured and made to rest with none to disturb you." This promise—this friendship of God, with us, through us, and beyond us—is what allows us, even now, to rejoice and be glad.

And as we enter Black History Month, we remember in a particular way those witnesses who trusted this promise when justice was denied, when dignity was threatened, and when hope had to be carried by faith alone. Men and women who believed that God's light shines in the darkness, and the darkness does not overcome it. Their courage, their prayer, their perseverance, how to walk humbly, and how to rejoice—not because the struggle is over, but because God is faithful.

May we learn from their witness. May we learn from their witness. And may we truly rejoice and be glad. May we be one.

Amen! Alleluia!

Support for Vocations and Seminarians:

The Office of Vocations serves in cultivating and encouraging vocations within the Diocese of Tucson. Its mission is to assist parishioners in discerning God's calling for their unique path in His Church, whether it is toward priesthood, religious life, or marriage. Additionally, this office is responsible for identifying and supporting qualified candidates while overseeing the educational and formative journey of seminarians. Currently, nine young men are discerning the priesthood for our Diocese, and the tuition for each seminarian is $50,000 per year.

February 2 Wilton Daniel Gregory (1947-)

Catholic Priest/First African American Cardinal in the United States/Archbishop of Washington, DC

"I have to try to remind people on both sides of the barque of Peter that there is room for us all and that we are not the first generation of Catholics to experience serious theological and pastoral differences of opinion. In fact, from the New Testament, strong leaders within the church disagreed openly. Eventually, the truly great ones found ways to heal conflicts and keep the Lord's flock united." February 6 Bryan Massingale (1957-)

Catholic priest/author/ activist/ theologian

"Thomas Aquinas taught us that courage is the precondition of all virtue. Without courage... We're not able to be just, because courage is that virtue that allows us to surmount the fear that comes with the following of the Gospel. If we're going to do anything that is difficult, there is going to be hesitation; there are ongoing obstacles and opposition, and the fear that those obstacles engender in us. Courage is that virtue that enables us to not be afraid."

Watch: April 2022, Fr. Massingale receiving the Robert M. Holstein Faith Doing Justice Award, given annually to individuals who have "demonstrated a significant commitment to leadership for social justice grounded in the spirituality of St. Ignatius of Loyola, the founder of the Society of Jesus."
