Fr. John Paul's Spiritual Brew

Do not let your hearts be troubled...”—Gospel of John. To have faith is not simply to agree with an idea—it is to enter into relationship. A living, breathing trust in Someone greater than ourselves. A trust that invites us to give ourselves freely and intentionally to the One who can hold us, lift us, transform us, and sustain us—no matter what we face, or what unfolds beyond our control. This is what it means to let go, not into emptiness, but into the vast ocean of God’s love, mercy, and peace. And this letting go is not passive. It is deeply active. To participate in the love of God is to step into a dynamic process of transformation—one that continues the very ministry of Jesus Christ here and now, in our midst, through our lives. In this light, our daily lives become a canvas—where the Holy Spirit is constantly at work, inviting us to embody faith, hope, love, and peace in every conversation, every challenge, every moment. This is the living legacy of Easter: not something we look back on, but something we live forward. A call to move with conviction and compassion—continually allowing our hearts and our communities to be renewed. And as we celebrate the 100th anniversary of the St. Thomas More Newman Center—our Centennial theme echoing Christ’s prayer, “May We Be One”—we are reminded that we stand within a legacy of grace, courage, and communion that stretches across generations and now lives in us. To our students: these final weeks of the semester can feel heavy—papers, exams, decisions, and for some, the bittersweet threshold of graduation. Stay steady. Stay faithful. There is more grace in you than you realize, and more strength being formed in you than you can see. So take a moment—breathe deeply. Breathe in the peace of the Holy Spirit. Let it quiet the noise, steady your heart, and guide your steps... even in a world that can feel restless and uncertain. Because our trust in the Holy Spirit is not a relic of the past—it is a vibrant, living source of renewal. A power that strengthens us, unites us and sends us forth to help shape a world marked by divine love and harmony. So be courageous. Stay the course. Trust deeply. May we be one.

Amen. Alleluia, Alleluia.
